GRAMMATICAL COHESION AS USED IN THE TEXT OF LIFE STYLE NEWS PICTURES IN TIME MAGAZINE

Muhammad Subhan¹, Nova Rina¹, Havid Ardi²
¹English Department, Faculty of Humanity, Bung Hatta University
²English Department, Faculty of Languages and Arts, State University of Padang
E-mail: Subhanm78@ymail.com, nova.rina007@ymail.com

Abstract
Cohesion is divided into two parts, namely grammatical cohesion and lexical cohesion. With the presence of cohesion can create the meaning, form, and structure of the sentence will be seen clearly. This thesis only focused on grammatical cohesion be employed to display text in news magazine TIME. This study aims at discovering the types of grammatical cohesion such as reference (reference), replacement (substitution), (ellipsis) and conjunctions contained in lifestyle news text display based on the concepts and theories of Halliday and Hassan (1976). From the analysis of the data the writer found the types of grammatical cohesion such as reference types (personal demonstrative and comparative reference) substitution (nominal), ellipsis (nominal verbal, clausal), and the type of conjunction (additive and causal conjunction Adversative). After examining the data, the writer conclude that it is necessary that grammatical cohesion within the understanding of a text, because of the presence of grammatical cohesion can support the integrity of the text so that the text is easier to understand and be understood.

Key words: reference, substitution, ellipsis, conjunction.